Kennedy And Arab Chiefs In Letters Cited Arab-Israel Conflict As A Reason For Tension

President Kennedy offered to share the burden of eliminating all causes of Israeli-Arab conflict if the parties wish the United States to do so. The President also told the chiefs of five Arab nations that the United States wanted to contribute to a solution of the Palestinian refugee problem "on a basis of repatriation or compensation for lost property."

The President wrote to the Arab chiefs but he has not made the letters public, says the New York Times. Some replies have been received and, according to authoritative Arab sources, there has been an exchange of at least five letters between Mr. Kennedy and President Gamal Abdel Nasser of the United Arab Republic.

The five original letters were not identical but were believed to have been substantially so.

The letter to King Hussein of Jordan said in part:

"While unfortunately tension is increasing in certain parts of the world, the Middle East countries have continued to be relatively tranquil in the last three years. This is particularly owing to the sound policy of leaders in the area who have given priority to development and economic projects.

"Both I and Secretary of State Dean Rusk are aware of the desire of the representatives of the various states in the Middle East to maintain this quiet atmosphere." Mr. Kennedy noted that "reasons for tension in the area still exist, not the least of which is Arab-Israel conflict which remains unsolved."

"No easy solution presents itself," he said. "Nevertheless, the United States is aware of the desire of the representatives of the various states in the Middle East to maintain this quiet atmosphere," Mr. Kennedy added, reports the New York Times. "The United States Government and people believe that an honest solution can be found and are determined to take part in the work and the shouldering of the heavy burdens which will lead to conclusions if the parties concerned sincerely wish them to do so.

"We want to contribute to a solution of the Palestinian refugees problem on a basis of repatriation or compensation for lost property, to assist in finding a just solution to the problem of the development of the water resources of the River Jordan and to cooperate in other aspects of this complicated problem.

"I am glad that the United Nations General Assembly emphasized the need to carry out its previous recommendations regarding the refugee problem. In this connection, I wish to emphasize that my government will continue to abide by the resolutions of the United Nations General Assembly regarding refugees and that their attitude will continue to be based on the effective and unbiased implementation of these resolutions so that the refugees stand to benefit."

Mr. Kennedy added:

"Being a member of the United Nations Conciliation Commission, the United States, which is concerned with the progress of the Middle East peoples, finds itself to carry out the tasks entrusted to this commission by the United Nations. We are determined to use all our influence to insure that the commission helps to achieve a peaceful and just solution.

"I sincerely hope that all the parties directly concerned will cooperate fully in connection with any program prepared by the commission in order to guarantee the best advantages to the Palestinian Arab refugees."

King Hussein of Jordan was reported to have told President Kennedy that the Arab nations wanted peace but that the existence of Israel constitutes a continuous danger to peace in the Middle East.

Informed sources said the King sent a ten-page letter to Mr. Kennedy in answer to a letter from Mr. Kennedy to the rulers of Jordan, Iraq, Saudi Arabia, and Lebanon, says the New York Times.

King Hussein's reply was said to have asserted that it was the right of the Palestinian Arab refugees to return to their homeland and that peace and stability would prevail in the Middle East only if a just solution to the Palestine problem was reached.

The King's letter also was reported to have said that Israel's existence formed a permanent danger to world peace and that the Arabs were ready to carry out their full responsibilities with regard to Palestine.

Foreign Minister Philip Takla, of Beirut, Lebanon, reported to the Foreign and Defense Committees of Lebanon's Parliament on President Kennedy's message. Mr. Takla told the committees that at a recent meeting of the Palestine Experts Committee and a Defense Council session in Cairo, delegates had agreed on a reply to Mr. Kennedy. In broad outline it says:

The existence of Israel is a violation of international law since it is based on racial and religious considerations. The Arabs are prepared to shoulder full responsibility in Palestine. But they feel there has been foreign intervention in the Middle East under the pretext of helping to solve Palestine problems, and this intervention has only aggravated the dispute.

Israel Plans New Desert City West Of Dead Sea

The badlands west of the Dead Sea have been marked by the Israelis as the next desert to be conquered. An industrial city is to be built on a windswept plateau near the buried Canaanite kingdom of Arad in the bleak Judean foothills, says the New York Times. A prefabricated village for 150 technicians is to rise there and the plans call for its growth during five years into a city of 10,000 —a modern Arad.

Arad will be the northern-most of five new desert cities that Premier David Ben-Gurion has said are to be built during the next decade. A $500,000,000 loan that Chancellor Adenauer is said to have promised Mr. Ben-Gurion during their meeting in New York last year is expected to aid in financing the chain of cities.

Last December the Israel Government appointed Arie Eliav as director of the Arad Development Project. Mr. Eliav is credited with the development of Lachish in southwestern Judea, which was similarly barren in 1964. The Lachish region now comprises thirty settlements with 15,000 inhabitants, who raise cotton, sugar beets, peanuts, and other vegetables and fruits. The hub of the region is a new town of 10,000, Kiryat Gat, which serves as the administrative, commercial, industrial, and cultural centre for Lachish.

The Arad region that Mr. Eliav's organization is to develop covers 100,000 acres of the southeastern Judean foothills, the Biblical wilderness of Judah and a plain in the south, says the New York Times. Historically, the area was a frontier of the Canaanite and Asseliti civilization and a barrier against nomad incursions from the south.

It was there that the Hebrews were halted in their march to the Promised Land after the exodus from Egypt. As related in Numbers, xiv, 45, "the Amalekite came down, and the Canaanites which dwelt in that hill, country, and smote them * * * even until Hormah" — west of Beersheba. So severe was the defeat that it took the Hebrews thirty-eight years to approach the Promised Land again — by another route roundabout to the east of the Dead Sea.

Today about 10,000 Bedouins roam the Arad region. As they are members of tribes that have headquarters in Jordan or in Egypt's Sinai Peninsula, the Israelis regard them as security risks. Unlike Lachish, the Arad project is not to be based on agriculture at the start; there is not now enough water in the region. Priority is to be given to urban development.

The city is to be built four miles east of the mound covering the ancient Canaanite city-kingdom, between two fields where natural methane gas has been discovered by drillers prospecting for oil. The gas is to supply not only power and heat but also raw materials for a petro-chemical industry, which is to be the economic mainstay of the city, says the New York Times. Potash from the Dead Sea twelve miles away will also be exploited.

Interfaith Head Warns On Extremists Who Stir Up Distrust

The head of the National Conference of Christians and Jews assailed those extremist groups who identify themselves as "conservative and patriots" and who foster "distrust among neighbors."

Dr. Lewis Webster Jones, president of the Conference and former president of Rutgers University, asserted that these groups, under the guise of patriotism, "attack political leaders of the greatest eminence, as well as attacking all dissident opinion."

Addressing 300 religious and civic leaders at the annual awards dinner of the Synagogue Council of America in New York, the educator warned that "Some of the recently publicized extremist groups propose to use the conspiratorial methods of Communism to fight Communism. This was Hitler's line," he said, according to the New York Times. "It is completely un-American, completely destructive of the freedoms which any truly patriotic, truly conservative American must defend with all his being."

The Synagogue Council presented its awards to Samuel H. Daroff, of Philadelphia; and Ludwig Jesselson and David Sarnoff, both of New York. The awards are given each year to leaders of the Orthodox, Conservative, and Reform movements who have distinguished themselves in advancing the ideals of Judaism and strengthening its institutions. The council represents the rabbinic and congregational groups of these three branches of Judaism.

In his address, Dr. Jones, who recently returned from visits to European countries and Israel, called attention to the need for agreement among leaders of all faiths on the meaning of religious liberty.

"Unless some clear consensus can be reached," he said, "the strengthened unity America has drawn from the common acceptance of Judeo-Christian tradition will be weakened and dissipated."

Dr. Jones expressed the conviction that it was possible for religious leaders in America to work out a process "by which we can identify and confront our differences in the public arena, without arousing bitterness or rancor."

He added that "It may be possible, with new procedures of inter-communication among religious leaders, to find broader areas of consensus than are now visible." In this connection, reports the New York Times, he said that his organization had started a four-year project on "Religious Freedom And Public Affairs," designed to raise the general level of public discussion and understanding among religious groups on issues of public concern.

At another point, Dr. Jones referred to the moral and social consequences of the Industrial Revolution, adding that "in the historic series of changes, the religious leadership of society flunked," and as a result Communism came in as a new force "to fill a moral gap."

Noted Rabbi Says Jews Must Not Execute Eichmann; Nations Also Guilty

Israel should not execute Adolf Eichmann, the Rev. Dr. William F. Rosenblum said at Temple Israel, in New York.

"It is one thing for the Israelite court to sentence Eichmann to death, the only thing they could do in view of the overwhelming and incontrovertible evidence of his guilt," Dr. Rosenblum said. "However, it is another thing for a Jewish court to carry out this sentence and to put a criminal to death. The latter is contrary to all the religious history of Judaism through the ages."

Rabbi Rosenblum, the leader of Temple Israel for thirty one years, is a former president of the Association of Reform Rabbis of New York and Vicinity and holds two law degrees, says the New York Herald Tribune. He has been cited by the National Conference of Christians and Jews for his contributions to inter-faith amity.

"The Israeli government must not forget that in addition to all the modern law it has enacted, it stands committed, by its own proclamation and insistence, to the moral and spiritual code of the Jewish religion as a guide to all its actions.

"Jewish religious practice has never countenanced the taking of one life by another even though he be a duly constituted officer of its highest legal body.

"It has always agreed with Hillel, ancient sage and reputed teacher of Jesus, that any Jewish court of law which would execute even one prisoner in seventy years should be regarded as 'Huvlanith' — murderously destructive. What the Jewish law always recognized then was that to ask one human being to put another to death was to make of the executioner a beast and to put a stain on the dignity of the court.

"One of the compelling reasons for not putting Eichmann to death for the murder of the six million Jews and other victims of the Hitler holocaust is that the guilt for this unspeakable crime must be placed also at the door of the entire civilized world for its indifference to what was happening to the Jews of Europe during that horrendous period.

"In all truth the great nations of Europe which stood idly by and did nothing until it was too late must share the responsibility for the ease with which the Nazis were able to herd hapless Jews into cattle cars and thrust them into the crematories and death camps.

"Eichmann himself has become insignificant; his trial has fulfilled the purpose for which it was intended — that is, to make the entire world realize that what happened in Germany under Hitler could happen again elsewhere if those who spread bigotry and hatred are permitted to spew their canards and slanders in public places and to spread their murderous propaganda through the mails.

"I am no longer interested in what hapens to Eichmann in Israel. I am more concerned with the strange and terrible fact that Rockwell is being given carte blanche by our Supreme Court to disseminate here the very poison of hatred which the Nazis came so near to bringing to this continent and to this country but for those 'ifs' which William Shirer so vividly depicts in his most recent writings.

"However justified the sentence of hanging is in Eichmann's case and however little even such a sentence fits the heinous crime of this monstrous Hitler associate (not puppet), I would hate to see the government of Israel ask any one of its citizens, or for that matter any man, to spring the trap; thus to brutalize even one human

Was Pioneer In World Promotion Of Men's Sportswear

Harry E. Doniger, chairman of the board of McGregor-Doniger, Inc., one of the nation's largest manufacturers of men's and boys' wear, died in his office, 666 Fifth Avenue, New York. He was 56 years old. Mr. Doniger was a pioneer in the promotion, distribution, and merchandizing of men's sportswear on an international scale, expanding his company's operations to the Far East, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, South America, and Europe, says the New York Times. He was associated with his brother, William, in the business which was founded by their father, the late David D. Doniger.

Mr. Doniger was born in March 13, 1904, and attended Lawrence (L. I.) High School. He was graduated from Cornell University in 1925 and subsequently joined the family company.

He was credited with playing a major role in the popularization of colorful men's sportswear. In 1955, he was named Man of The Year for the Men's Wear Industry in recognition of his contributions to the expansion and successes of the trade.

His home was in Rye, N. Y., where he was active in civic and philanthropic affairs. Mr. Doniger was cited in 1957, by the United Jewish Appeal and the Joint Defense Appeal.

He was a member of the executive committee of the American Institute of Men's and Boys' Wear and of the executive board of the Father's Day Council. Mr. Doniger was for many years active in the work of the Boy Scouts of America and served as chairman of the finance committee and a member of the steering committee of the Greater New York Councils of the Boy Scouts.

He was chairman of the advisory committee of the New York University Seminar in Men's Wear Retailing and he lectured frequently at colleges and universities on facets of the industry.

Mr. Doniger was chairman of the board of trustees of Temple Sholom, of Greenwich, Conn., says the New York Times. In 1941 he married the former Marion Sterngold, of New York. Mr. Doniger was elected president of the company in 1950 and in 1956 became chairman of the board.

Besides his brother, he leaves his wife; a son, William; a daughter, Joy; his mother, Mrs. David D. Doniger; and a sister, Mrs. Merrill D. Lipsey.

Molly Picon's MISH-MASH

Most actresses make their debuts on the stage. I made mine in a trolley car. Mama was taking her five year old "Malkale" to sing in an amateur show. She was determined I would win first prize because it was a five dollar gold piece and we needed the money.

You should have seen me on that trolley car. I was dressed in a red "cording pleated" dress, an imitation karakul coat, imitation ermine bonnet and muff, all of which Mama had painstakingly made for me herself. A drunk staggered up to me and said, "Where ya goin', fanshy pants?" Mama looked down quickly to see if my bloomers were showing. Then she said haughtily, "My daughter is on her way to the theatre to sing. Show the man, Molly dear". So I stood up in the crowded trolley car and went through my routine, adding an unflattering impersonation of the drunken man. "Thatsh great", he shouted. With that, he grabbed my "ermine" hat and made every passenger in the car drop a few coins into it. I did manage to win the five dollar first prize at the amateur show, plus a pocketful of assorted coins that the audience tossed up onto the stage as I sang. When we got home, Mama dumped all the loot onto the kitchen table and counted it. "Malkale", she said joyfully, "almost ten dollars. That's more than Papa makes in a week. That settles it. You'll be an actress."

One thing about Mama, she made decisions fast. Not everybody can make decisions as easily as Mama could, except, of course, when it comes to picking the best brand of fine kosher food. Then there's nothing to decide . . . people know already that it's Rokeach, and it has been since 1870. Rokeach not only makes the tastiest gefilte fish you ever dipped into horseradish, but 15 varieties of soup, too.

I happen to be partial to Rokeach Barley and Mushroom Soup, for a very personal reason. I don't like to eat a heavy meal before going on in "Milk and Honey." So right in my dressing room, I warm up some Rokeach Barley and Mushroom Soup. It's delicious, and all those vegetables in it make it substantial and nourishing. If you've seen the show, maybe you're wondering where a woman of my age gets the energy to do somersaults, leaps and high kicks. From Rokeach Barley and Mushroom Soup. Could I make a living without it?

Molly

Brights FINE CANADIAN Wines

SINCE 1874

At your sabbath table, a decanter of wine is as much at home as a challah.

No wine is more welcome in Jewish homes in Canada than Mazel Tov, a wine made from Concord grapes grown on the sunny slopes of the Niagara Peninsula.

Mazel Tov is ruby red in colour, and richly sweet—but not cloying—to the taste. It's a wine you'll "remember", the kind of wine that you used to taste many years ago.

Mazel Tov, made 'Kosher l'Pesach' under strict rabbinical supervision, is available throughout the year for every 'simcha'.

NOTED RABBI SAYS JEWS MUST NOT EXECUTE EICHMANN

being, it seems to me, would put an ignominious blot on Judaism as a religion and our religion should be as precious to the state of Israel as its record as a government of Jews.

"The hanging of Eichmann will not bring back a single one of the six million men, women, and children whom Hitler and Eichmann and others turned to ashes. Mayhap, too, that in giving him added years of life it may be possible to unearth from him even more of the causes for this eternal sickness of civilization, this disease more cruel than cancer of the body, this terrible disease of the mind which has not yet ceased to be."

An Arab Town In Israel

BY LEO HEIMAN, ISRAELI JOURNALIST

There were only two all-Arab towns in Israel — Nazareth and Shfar-Am, both in Galilee. Jewish refugees from Eastern Europe are now resettled in the spacious residential quarters of New Nazareth which already has a population of 8,000 Jews. This leaves Shfar-Am the only remaining all-Arab town in Israel. "Nazareth always gave us trouble, in war and in peace. It's full of spies, saboteurs, trouble-makers and subversives," a police officer told me, "but Shfar-Am was always quiet and law-abiding."

"Why is that so?", I asked. "Aren't the same Arabs living in both places — only twelve miles apart?"

The police officer shrugged his shoulders. "Perhaps it's a tradition, perhaps it's the personality of Shfar-Am's mayor. Who knows?"

The first thing a traveler approaching Shfar-Am sees is its skyline of Christian churches, Moslem mosques, and Druse temples. Shfar-Am's population consists of Christian and Moslem Arabs, with the pro-Israeli Druse holding the balance of power.

The town itself is an example of Oriental chaos. Old fortresses and mosques and half-ruined mud-brick houses, surrounded by new palaces of Oriental potentates, crowd each other in a relatively narrow area between two mountain ridges. Streets, alleys, and passageways run in all directions, sometimes joining each other, sometimes ending in dead-end walls.

The cattle-market square is filled with a cacophony of sound. Jewish butchers, sausage-makers, and cattle dealers argue, bargain, and buy camels, cows, sheep, goats, and donkeys from picturesque-looking Arabs. The cattle may have been stolen from neighboring Arab countries by Bedouin rustlers or smuggled into Israel but the tradition of the Shfar-Am cattle market forbids asking questions about the cattle's origin.

Flies and gnats gather in clouds over the busy market-place, whose pungent smell of manure, frying oil, Turkish coffee, unwashed human bodies, cattle, goats, and spicy Oriental snacks permeates the whole town.

The narrow winding streets and alleys seem not to have been cleaned since the time of the Roman occupation. Heaps of rubbish and manure serve as playgrounds for dirty but healthy-looking Arab children. Cats chased by packs of mongrel dogs, long caravans of camels and donkeys, and the sharp smell of urine mark the street-corners of Shfar-Am. Small and big cafes and all kinds of eating-places line both sides of the main street. On small chairs grouped around rickety tables hundreds of Arabs sit, play games of cards and shash-besh (dice), smoke water-pipes (with or without narcotics), drink coffee, and listen to the blaring radios tuned in to Saut el Arab (Voice of the Arabs) from Cairo.

No women are to be seen in the cafes, of course, but the streets are full of them, carrying water in earthenware jugs balanced on their heads, chasing their children through the rubbish heaps, carrying food from groceries and the open-air market, or collecting their goats from the pasture-supervisors to milk at home. In the small hole-in-the-wall windowless shops, where you can buy anything from a German automatic pistol to a brand-new Japanese sewing-machine, a roaring business is being done in old American clothes and discarded GI footwear, now the vogue in Arab areas of Israel.

The Mayor proved to be a regal-looking man of about sixty-five, immaculately dressed in a black suit, black tie, and a red fez, a typical product of the Ottoman administration which turned out officials who knew their value and showed it. Juabar Effendi is the mayor longest in office in Israel and probably in the world. He was appointed by General Allenby's British military administration of Palestine in 1918, and reappointed or re-elected since. Juabar Effendi was celebrating the fortieth anniversary of his mayoralty, and this was the official reason for our visit.

"The Allies, in their haste to grab the spoils of victory in the First World War, broke up two great and stabilizing empires — the Austro-Hungarian Empire in Europe and the Ottoman Empire in the Middle East. The result was that they got Hitler in Europe and Nasser in the Middle East plus communism all over the Afro-Asian-Eastern European area. Dismemberment of the Ottoman Empire created a power vacuum in the Middle East, which has not been filled since. This is the crux of the so-called Middle Eastern problem — not any real or artificial quarrels between Arabs and Jews," said Juabar Effendi.

A devout Catholic, the French-educated Mayor of Shfar-Am rejects pan-Islamic Arab nationalism. "Nobody spoke of an Arab nation until the British coined the term towards the end of the First World War to suit their own political ends," he explains. "The interests of Egypt and Iraq, for instance, are opposed to each other, while the Bedouin tribes of Saudi Arabia despise the city-dwellers of Syrian Damascus and are themselves despised as barbarians by the Lebanese. Only the Ottoman Empire was able to provide a common roof for all the tribes and ethnic groups inhabiting the vast area between the Persian Gulf and the Suez Canal."

Juabar Effendi is equally outspoken concerning the State of Israel. "I was denounced as a renegade and traitor by the Arab nationalists because I always spoke in favor of a Jewish return to Palestine. Numerous Arab families in Shfar-Am are descended from the Jewish inhabitants of this town which was a flourishing Jewish community about seventeen centuries ago. Why, the ruins of the ancient Jewish synagogue are still standing here today. Naturally, I also believe that the Arab inhabitants of Palestine, living in the same house for centuries, should have rights and privileges at least equal to those of the Jewish tenants who were expelled a long time ago. According to family tradition, we have Jewish blood in our veins, and if this does not make us blood brothers, I don't know what does."

A local schoolteacher disagreed with the Mayor during a talk we had in the back-room of a small cafe, whose proprietor served us roasted goat's liver with green parsley, small red peppers, sour slices of eggplant in oil, ground beans with onions, and a soup of potatoes, peas, cabbage, cauliflower and the genitals of cattle. (This was the standard Shfar-Am lunch, guaranteed to restore virility. So the proprietor assured us while scratching himself vigorously.) The teacher, a young Arab about twenty-three years of age, was sharply anti-Israeli.

"You wish to know why Shfar-Am seems to be so loyal to Israel?", he said. "Because we Moslems are here in a minority, that's why. Of course, there are many Arab Christians who are as good Arab Nationalists as in Nazareth, but here the Druse hold the balance of power and the Druse are always loyal to the winning side.

"Another reason is that Shfar-Am's economical situation is very good, better than it ever was in its past history. Trade and commerce are booming, education is free of charge, the Government gave us electricity and running water, loans and outright grants.

"The Ministry of Agriculture irrigated our fields, so that our harvests, orchards, vegetable gardens and tobacco plantations yield three times as much as they did in the past. The ministry of Health cut down infant mortality, built a hospital, arranged for clinics and infirmaries, gave everybody injections against tetanus, typhoid, tuberculosis, dysentery, infantile paralysis, cholera, plague, and what-not. We are prosperous, sleek, and economically satisfied. But morally, to any thinking Arab, all this progress and prosperity does not mean a thing."

"Why not?"

"Why not? I'll tell you why not. Let us assume that you are fighting a war with Syria and that Israel loses that war and Syria occupies Haifa and Northern Israel, leaving an independent and revengeful Israel licking its wounds in Tel-Aviv, Jerusalem, and Beersheba. Let us assume further that the Syrian conquerors do not butcher you Jews, do not expel you, do not mistreat you in any way, but give you Syrian citizenship, full demo-

How Abraham Lincoln Began An Era Of New Status For Judaism

The first Rabbi to minister to the needs of American soldiers of the Jewish faith was a New Yorker who successfully lobbied just a hundred years ago for correction of the law which officially restricted chaplaincy service to clergymen "of Christian denomination." The story of the Rabbi, the Rev. Dr. Arnold Fischel, one-time leader of New York's Congregation Shearith Israel, will be told during American Jewish History Week, April 1-8. Dr. Abram Kanof, president of the American Jewish Historical Society, is the sponsor of the national observance. The theme of the observance, which will coincide with the Society's annual meeting, April 1-2 in Philadelphia, will be: "The Centennial Of The Jewish Chaplaincy Services In The United States."

Although Dr. Fischel won the change in law that made the Jewish chaplaincy an official fact, he served only as volunteer in ministering to Civil War Jewish GIs. He was never commissioned. It was, in fact, the denial of his commission that led to the lobbying, through protests, petitions, editorials, sermons, and letters, and to the change in law.

The first Jewish Chaplain commissioned by the American government, he was the first commissioned by any government, was the Rev. Jacob Frankel, Cantor of Rodeph Shalom Congregation, in Philadelphia. His commission was dated September 18, 1862. By the simple act of signing his appointment as a military hospital chaplain, Abraham Lincoln inaugurated an era of new status for Judaism: unquestioned equality for the Jewish faith alongside Christian denominations. Rev. Frankel served the Jewish wounded in the Philadelphia area from the date of his appointment throughout the remainder of the Civil War.

A second Rabbi, Bernard H. Gotthelf, of Louisville, Kentucky, received a similar appointment on May 6, 1863. He served 18 military hospitals, including two in near-by Indiana, and tried to serve Christians as well as Jews.

A few weeks before Gotthelf's commission was signed, the officers of the 54th New York Volunteer Regiment elected the nation's first Jewish regimental chaplain. Rabbi Ferdinand Sarner, formerly of Rochester, N.Y., served with his men through many battles, including the crucial battle at Gettysburg. He was wounded at Gettysburg and discharged for disability after his recovery in a military hospital, first in a long line of rabbis to see action with American military forces.

A poster dramatizing Rabbi Sarner's role, along with Jewish chaplains of World Wars I and II, is included in a kit of materials prepared by the American Jewish Historical Society for use in observances of American Jewish History Week. The posters and the kit may be obtained by writing to the Society at its archives, 150 Fifth Avenue, New York.

The Board of Delegates of American Israelites, a central Jewish organization in Civil War days, led the national movement which succeeded in broadening the chaplaincy law to include Jewish clergymen. Dr. Fischel's lobbying experiences, recorded in the annuals of the American Jewish Historical Society (Vol. 12) throw light on Abraham Lincoln's attitudes towards Jews.

"All the influential gentlemen assured me it would be impossible for me to get an audience," the Rabbi reported to Henry I. Hart, president of the Board of Delegates from Washington. Undismayed by these forecasts, Dr. Fischel stood in line at the White House with hundreds of others, including some who, as they told him, had been waiting three days. From among these, he was "at once invited" into the President's room and "received with marked courtesy," he wrote.

"Mr. Lincoln", he said, "questioned me and then told me he fully admitted the justice of my remarks; that he believed the exclusion of Jewish chaplains to have been altogether unintentional on the part of Congress and that something ought to be done to meet this case." A day later, Dr. Fischel received a note from Lincoln which described the law as "deficient" and said: "I shall try to have a new law broad enough to cover what is desired by you on behalf of the Israelites."

Not long after, both houses of Congress adopted without dissent a change in the law authorizing the appointment as chaplains of "regularly ordained ministers, those recommended by some authorized ecclesiastical body." The appointment of Rev. Frankel followed soon after.

Another early Jewish chaplain was Michael M. Allen, a young Philadelphia Hebrew teacher. Before the law was changed, the 65th Regiment of the 5th Pennsylvania Cavalry, known as Cameron's Dragoons, had elected him. But when a YMCA worker traveling through the camps discovered who he was, he was compelled to resign. The Cameron's Dragoons, commanded by Col. Max Einstein, a loyal and forthright Jew, were not willing to abandon their efforts to have a Jewish chaplain. They promptly elected Rabbi Fischel to the post. He applied for a commission, but under the law, this was denied. The denial led to Fischel's dispatch as a lobbyist to Washington, where he served as part-time volunteer chaplain to the Jewish wounded, while working for the changed legislation.

DISCRIMINATION IN EMPLOYMENT

THE PURPOSE OF THE ACT is to protect workers against discrimination in employment and in trade union membership on the grounds of RACE, RELIGION, COLOUR or NATIONAL ORIGIN.

THE ACT APPLIES TO employers in works or undertakings under federal jurisdiction and to trade unions representing persons employed therein. These undertakings include shipping, navigation, railways, canals, telegraphs, aerodromes, airlines, federal crown corporations, banking, radio and television broadcasting, as well as works or undertakings that have been declared to be for the general advantage of Canada, or are outside the exclusive jurisdiction of the provincial legislatures.

THE ACT FORBIDS an employer to refuse to employ a person or to discriminate against an employee because of his RACE, RELIGION, COLOUR, or NATIONAL ORIGIN. An employer is also forbidden to use an employment agency which practices such discrimination, or to publish employment advertising which is discriminatory, or to use discriminatory questions, written or oral, in connection with applications for employment.

THE ACT ALSO FORBIDS discriminatory action by trade unions in regard to union membership or employment on the grounds of RACE, RELIGION, COLOUR or NATIONAL ORIGIN.

ANY PERSON MAKING A COMPLAINT under the provisions of the Act, or giving evidence or assistance in proceedings under the Act, is protected from any retaliatory action that may be taken against him.

In addition to the federal legislation several of the provinces also have fair employment practices laws or similar legislation which protect workers from discrimination in employment in industries which fall under provincial jurisdiction in the province concerned. Provinces in which such legislation is in existence are Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and British Columbia.

COMPLAINTS UNDER THE ACT SHOULD BE MADE IN WRITING TO THE

Director of Industrial Relations,

cratic rights, excellent economic conditions and most humane treatment. In short, let us assume that they treat you as well as you treat the Arabs of Israel and that your economic and material standard of living is much higher than in the remaining independent areas of Israel.

"Tell me, would you accept defeat and become loyal Syrian citizens, be willing to see Haifa become a Syrian city and be ready to integrate yourself in Syrian political life, or would you plot and conspire to overthrow the Syrian occupation and reunite the conquered Haifa area with Tel-Aviv and Jerusalem? You do not have to answer, my friend, you would do it even if the Syrian regime made a millionaire out of you, gave you two houses and three cars, and treated all conquered Israelis as first-class Syrian citizens.

"Even then, you would only wait for the moment of reunion with your brothers in Tel-Aviv and Jerusalem. And even if you would not plot and conspire actively, and would pay lip service to the Syrian state, deep in your heart your only true loyalty would belong to your own people."

Since there was nothing to be gained, it seemed, by arguing with him, we remained silent. "What do you suggest," my companion asked finally, after a protracted silence broken only by the buzz of flies, "is there no way out?"

"I am afraid there is no way out," the school-teacher answered sadly. "Believe me, I do not want war and bloodshed, but Jewish Nationalism and Arab Nationalism are like fire and water, and cannot exist together. You are the fire, but we are the water, and we'll extinguish you in the end."

"If it's a gasoline or oil fire, no water will help," I said, trying to joke. "You'll need a special foam or chemical solution, and even then the fire will probably win."

A Druse, honorably discharged from the Israeli Army, who had received a house-construction loan from the Ministry of Defense and was building a small house for himself and his 19-year-old bride in the northern outskirts of Shfar-Am, spat in the dust when I told him of our conversation with the schoolteacher.

"These Arabs are great talkers," he grinned contemptuously. "They talked themselves into world literature with their 1001 Nights and they talked themselves right out of a country in 1948. Talk, talk, and talk, that's all they know. The trouble is, they believe what they say. They can sit for twenty hours on end in a cafe, talking about a revolution against Israel, but if it comes to fighting and they hear one shot fired at them, they all run away to their homes." He spat again.

"Most of the younger Arabs are bitter because they can't become Government officials, which is the highest of all honors to any Arab. The educated young Arabs are the worst of the lot. The simple peasants and cattle merchants, tobacco dealers, and cafe proprietors are quite satisfied with their lot and do not care who rules them as long as their economic situation is good. They were loyal to the Turks; they were loyal to the British; and now they are loyal to Israel.

"But if an Arab graduates from high-school he believes the world owes him something. Since he knows how to read and write and who Julius Caesar was, it would be a loss of face to him to work in the fields or help his father in the shop. Nor can he work as a mechanic, tractor-driver, or machinist. Since he knows how to write, he can only work in an office.

"How many office vacancies do you have in a town the size of Shfar-Am? And if a lawyer has an opening in his office, he takes in one of his own relatives. The disappointed and embittered high-school graduates do not work; they don't do anything but sit all day in a cafe, complain and plot. They are the bacteria of subversion."

The sun was setting over the glossy blue of Haifa Bay when we left Shfar-Am, driving to Haifa past the Police Academy and Central Training Camp of the Israeli Police. Far behind us, the yellow lights of Shfar-Am flickered in the gathering dusk. At that distance, we could neither smell the alleys of Shfar-Am nor see what was going on behind the thick walls of its houses. But we had had a glimpse into some of the hearts of Shfar-Am.

Program Of The Labor Zionist Movement For The American Zionist Council

As an active partner and participant in the American Zionist Council, the Labor Zionist Movement views the current discussion of the future of the AZC with a mixed feeling of responsibility and concern. Our responsibility is to help the Council become a powerful, unified instrument for Zionist influence within American Jewry. Our concern stems from the inability of the Council to make a real beginning in that direction to date.

It is no secret that the leadership of the Zionist movement in many institutions in the community has been reduced, and its program of activities in many areas, particularly those related to financial and political support for Israel, has been taken over by other agencies and elements. This is, however, a mixed phenomenon. To some extent it reflects our organizational weakness. In other more fundamental respects, it represents the strength of the Zionist idea. Our movement, in other words, now has important non-Zionist allies in certain phases of its program.

Therefore our problem now is to bring Zionist influence to bear on other areas of Jewish life. Most American Jews are "pro-Israel" and support it in many ways, but few are committed in thought and action to the concepts of the unity of the Jewish people - Am Echad — and the centrality of Eretz Israel — of Zion in Jewish civilization.

In practical terms, this means that the role of the Zionist movement, operating through the American Zionist Council, must be to influence those community institutions which have the potential for insuring Jewish continuity, creativity and unity: the educational systems, the community councils and the federations and welfare funds, even the synagogues.

Who will be the advocate for the Zionist theme of Jewish history as it should be taught in the schools? Who will promote the teaching of Hebrew as a living bridge between Israel and young American Jews who were not even born when the State was declared? Who will fight for a proper balance in communal allocations between institutions, such as hospitals, that no longer meet Jewish needs, on the one hand, and the requirements of Jewish immigration to Israel, or of Jewish education in America, on the other? Who will demand that our community relations agencies present Israel in the proper way before American public opinion? Who will initiate the movement for the democratic constitution of an over-all Jewish community body to do away with the organized chaos that now prevails? And finally, but by no means least, who will create a climate for "aliyah" from America and the instruments and means to make it more feasible?

The role of the Zionist councils, nationally and locally, must be to co-ordinate and direct the efforts of individual Zionists of stature in the communities and to mobilize all Zionists for these purposes.

This is the logical translation to the American scene of the platform adopted by the last Zionist Congress.

In evaluating the present activities of the AZC, as reflected in the work being done by its various departments, the main criterion must be the extent to which they strengthen the impact of the Zionist idea on American Jewish life. Even before the Agency transferred some of its departments to the Council, we contended that it would not be enough for the Council merely to continue the work of the departments as it was carried on by them before, however valuable that work may have been in its old form. The transfer, we maintained, would have significance only as the Council would proceed to enlarge on the previous work of the departments, translate it into terms affecting the Zionist constituencies in the communities, and lead to a revitalized Zionist activity on the local level in the areas with which the departments were concerned. That this has not been done until now, is due not alone to the financial problems that have beset the Council, but even more to the lack of a proper appreciation on the part of some, if not all, of the constituent organizations that not only the fate of the Council but that of the whole Zionist movement in America is at stake.

Clearly, the time has come when we must determine on new initiatives by the Zionist movement in America, working jointly through the Council. We believe that the following steps must be taken:

1) Department by department, the program must be systematically analyzed with a view to relating it to concrete activities that can be undertaken by the local Councils and through them, by the Zionist constituencies in the communities.
2) At least in the major communities, steps must be taken to bring over into the local area the full Council program — not only the public relations work, but also the Council's work in the fields of youth, education, and culture, and the promotion of "aliyah".
3) In all the communities, and certainly in the major ones, the Councils must undertake the mobilization of the Zionist forces vis-a-vis the local welfare funds, federations, community councils and bureaus of Jewish education. Both the Councils and the individual Zionists who already participate in these agencies must receive guidance from the AZC with regards to the Zionist program and interests they must pursue in these general community agencies.
4) In at least four or five major communities, the local Zionist Councils must be stimulated and encouraged to initiate an effort for the establishment of model, non-denominational, Jewish community day schools. This can then be carried over into other communities.
5) A vigorous effort must be made to organize not only students, but also faculty members on the university campuses in support of Zionist, as well as Israel interests.
6) A series of "aliyah" projects should be devised together with the Jewish Agency, the promotion of which should be an important part of the Council's work. Pre-"aliyah" groups should be formed of interested persons for instruction, learning Hebrew, and preparing for "aliyah" in a planned way.
7) In setting up these activities in the communities, an effort must be made to involve not only members of our Zionist organizations, but also professionals in Jewish communal service, persons of stature in the community, and others who may be brought into specific areas of our work in fields of special interest to them.

We believe that this program is essential for the whole Zionist movement in America, and that the movement has the capacity and can raise the means to carry it out. Unless the movement is willing to proceed along such lines, not only the Council, but the movement as a whole will be unable to overcome its present intolerable condition, and the raison d'etre of the Council will be brought into question.

From the aforesaid, it is obvious that we are opposed to the suggestion that the Council should transfer back to the Jewish Agency those departments and activities it took over from the latter nearly two years ago. We also see no merit in the proposal advanced by one of the organizations that the Council should allocate its functions among the respective groups and serve only as a coordinating body. There is no one function of the Council that can be taken over in its entirety by any one group, nor would we agree to any such arrangement, and we believe that most of the Council's constituents would not do so either. What is needed is more joint effort, not less, and the pooling of all of our resources, not continued fragmentation. We are convinced that each of our organizations stands to gain more through the activization of its members in such a joint enterprise, than it would lose by real or imagined cession of a part of its "sovereignty".

The program we have outlined depends in its essence not only on our respective national bodies, but even more on local mobilization and grass-roots support. It is therefore necessary that it be presented to a nation-wide Assembly of American Zionists to be convoked some time this year. Such an assembly would also serve to give the AZC and its leadership a truly representative and democratic base, and it would redound to the prestige of American Zionism.

We believe, too, that the time has come to revive consideration of the decisions of the recent Zionist Congresses for the establishment of a Zionist Federation in this country, for which the Council was regarded as only the initial base. By bringing together all the Zionist organizations in a more organic unity, we are convinced, the implementation of the program we have outlined would be best assured.

We, of the Labor Zionist Movement in America, pledge ourselves and our members throughout the country to participate actively in the implementation of this program. We are confident that with the same spirit on the part of all, the AZC can be developed into an instrument for the revitalization of American Zionism as a force within American Jewish life.

COMPARE!

Look around. Compare annual rents in several buildings before you sign a lease. Also, compare the usable space you get for the rent you pay.

In Place Ville Marie you get more usable space than in conventional buildings — old or new. This means you may use less space.

Besides, you get more exclusive features in Place Ville Marie; a three-acre plaza, an entire shopping promenade, direct access to trains and future subway. Plus the address.

Give us a chance to prove your annual rent at Place Ville Marie can be equal to the rent you would pay in a building offering much less. Call Ron McFarlane, UN 1-4703.

And remember, the annual cost of usable space is the real measure of value.
